Do I need a historic building appraisal?

Appraisals offer research into the history & development of a building, an assessment of architectural & historic significance & a summary of national & local planning policies and their impact on your project.

- Historic research offers an insight into significance – what should be retained / what may be replaced
- You may need to show your conservation officer that you have fully appraised your building before they allow work to start.

Offering a pragmatic approach to heritage

Our team can provide advice to help streamline your conservation project by getting to the heart of the matter with impartial advice highlighting priorities, phasing and specification.

Making conservation easier to understand

We can help with advice on:

- Understanding your building – its history, construction, character & fabric
- Maintenance & repair
- Repairs to plasterwork – what can be salvaged
- Advice on reducing damp problems
- Materials selection
- Architectural detailing
- Liaising with your Conservation Officer, national heritage bodies, building control
